Story: A long-lost letter must find its way to the recipient twenty years later. A rabble-rouser learns a lesson in humility and love along the way. Review: When Hanu Raghavapudi debuted in 2012 with the beautiful Andala Rakshasi, the audience had high hopes from him that were somewhat trashed thanks to films that followed. But with Sita Ramam, the director redeems himself with a poetic love story which might not be as unpredictable as the makers think but is one that keeps you hooked none-the-less. In 1985, Afreen (Rashmika Mandanna) is a Pakistani rabble-rouser studying in London who is set in her ways and harbours an intense dislike for anything and everything Indian. She might be from the other side of the border but her feelings mirror that of youngsters on this side of the border even today. Early on in the film she's told that the solution for her misplaced anger is love, a notion she brushes off as the sayings of an old man. But when she begrudgingly decides to deliver a lost letter to India, she's transported back to 1964 where the poetic love story of Lt. Ram (Dulquer Salmaan) and Sita (Mrunal Thakur) unfolds. He is an orphan; she is a woman with a secret she can't reveal. Even as Afreen and her begrudging partner-in-crime Balaji (Tharun Bhascker) learn everything there is to known about Sita and Ram, she might end up learning a lesson or two along the way. On the surface Sita Ramam is nothing more than the love story of two people from different worlds falling in love while writing letters to each other. But dig beneath all the opulence, old-school glamour, beautiful clothes, VFX butterflies and extravagant sets, you find a story that has its heart set in humanity and love. Hanu does a good job of showing, instead of preaching, how irrespective of what god you pray to and what country you belong to, it's only humanity that matters at the end of the day. Even as not everyone in the armies on both sides of the border believe this, Ram and Major Tariq (Sachin Khedekar) inadvertently set off a butterfly effect with their empathy that doesn't just touch numerous lives, it even leaves them better off. And beyond that, Sita and Ram do have a love story that makes you want to root for them. The film is not without its flaws though because once you get past the beauty of it all and think back, there might be chinks in logic that might nag you. Not to mention, Sita Ramam really doesn't set into motion till a particular sequence sees Ram inundated with letters from across the country, from people who felt touched enough to reach out to a complete stranger. As Afreen learns more about Ram and Sita, so do you. But the way the narrative unfolds, it assumes you can't have predicted anything about Sita, Vishnu (Sumanth) – a fellow soldier who always seemed jealous of Ram, and even Afreen, while you can kind of predict everything along the way if you're paying enough attention. What's good is that Hanu tries his best to tie up all the knots, giving Afreen, Balaji and us enough answers, but that also means there are some questions that leave you wanting. Dulquer and Mrunal steal the show in Sita Ramam. For a film like this to work, you need to be invested in their story and the actors do a good job in ensuring that. They breathe life into their characters and it doesn't hurt that Mrunal looks breath-taking in the film. Rashmika, Tharun, Sachin and Sumanth do a good enough job while Vennela Kishore and Murli Sharma are a hoot. A lot of able actors from Priyadarshi and Rahul Ravindran to Tinu Anand and Gautam Vasudev Menon make short appearances that work well for the film. PS Vinod, Shreyaas Krishna's cinematography and Vishal Chandrasekhar's music truly aid in bringing the world of Sita Ramam to life. But a special shoutout must be given to art director Irfan Rashid Sheikh and costume designer Sheetal Sharma for transporting the audience so seamlessly to the 60s and 80s. With Sita Ramam, Hanu manages to deliver a story that's moving and a film that's visually aesthetic and pleasing. Go watch this one if you're looking for a breather among all the mass masala. Page 2The Times of India, TNN, Jul 1, 2022, 09.01 AM ISTCritic's Rating: 2.5/5Story: Somayaji, aka Somu (Sriram), a peon's son, had gone to America and became a successful man professionally. He even heads a reputed organisation as a CEO, but despite his fame and money, he struggles to sleep peacefully. His feeling of emptiness affects people around him - so much so that his wife leaves him and gets married to a westerner. Even his adventures with beautiful women don't bring him solace. He calls on a psychiatrist (Sanjay Swaroop) to find out the cause of his situation. The psychiatrist asks him about the happiest moments in his life. After a prolonged discourse, Somu says it was his school days in Rajahmundry. He also reveals his love story with Chandni and how deeply he loves her. The doctor advises Somu to meet Chandni (Avika Gor) to have closure. Now in his middle age, he breaks from his luxurious life in the US and travels to India, hoping to meet Chandni. On reaching, he meets his childhood buddy Gourav (Vennela Ramarao) and plans for a 10th class reunion to meet Chandini. What envelops subsequently forms the narrative of the story. Did Chandini attend the gettogether? Did Somu finally meet Chandini? Review: Well-known cinematographer Garudavega Anji turned director with the film 10th Class Diaries. Anji, who also handled the cinematography department, shines in his territory, especially after the interval. It was an honest effort, and he did a commendable job putting together a coming-of-age romantic comedy. The drawback of this movie is its rhetorical theme, which the Telugu audience has experienced time and again in films - from Naa Autograph to recent Janu. The school flashback in the first half needed better treatment and performance refinement. However, the BGM by Chinna and the music composed by Suresh Bobbili of Virataparvam are decent and try to amplify the emotion. The film also threw light upon misogyny and false pride and honour that have been plaguing certain sections of society. Based on actual events, the film will impress the audience in parts.The camaraderie, timing and situational humour among the old school friends Somu (Sriram), Gourav (Vennela Ramarao), Half Boil (Srinivas Reddy), Nagalakshmi (Himaja) and Soumya (Archana) will definitely make you laugh. Avika Gor as Chandini will surprise the audience with her intense and committed performance, and classic Nassar aced his role as a crude and nonchalant father. While Bhanu, Rohini, Satya Krishna and Madhumita played important parts, the other cast included Tagubotu Ramesh, Gemini Suresh, Ambati Srinu, Jabardast Ramu, Chitram Srinu, Jabardast Borababu, Ganapati, Shivaji Raja, Rupa Lakshmi and Rajeswari Nair. The movie, edited by Prawin Pudi, had choreography by Shekar and Vijay Bunny, fights by Jashuva Master and was designed by Ananth.Like other films dealing with school days, this film will also make you recollect your past and bring back many memories. However, while the movie succeeds in taking you back in time and making you recall precious moments, its rhetorical theme, archaic screenplay and overarching emotions at places became its bane. What works in favour of the film is its light-hearted humour, the effervescent feeling of love, cinematic and peppy vibe after the interval and impressive performances by the lead and supporting actors. - Paul NicodemusPage 3 Kartik Aaryan and Kiara Advani starrer 'Bhool Bhulaiyaa 2' is currently in its fifth week and it seems to be unstoppable at the box office. View this post on Instagram A post shared by KARTIK AARYAN (@kartikaaryan) As 'Liger' marks the Bollywood debut of actor Vijay Deverakonda, the handsome actor is going all out with the promotions for his upcoming film. The actor is running busy managing multi-city tours and being a part of mega-events to promote 'Liger.' The promotional events were kickstarted with the trailer launch in Mumbai as well as in Hyderabad. Recently, Vijay made his presence felt at the promotional event of 'Sita Ramam.' His rumoured girlfriend Rashmika Mandanna was also present at the event. The actor shared a small glimpse of the event on his Instagram handle. Anchor Suma hosted the event. When he was asked why he is not doing love stories, he said that he wanted to do something new this time to drive away monotony. He added that he wanted to break the monotony by playing action-oriented films, instead of lover boy characters. While talking about his co-star in Geetha Govindam, Vijay said, "Rashmika, you always look so pretty and beautiful. Everyone is giggling as soon as I mention your name. I don't know why." Rashmika laughed at Vijay's comments. Pairing with Dulquer Salmaan is Mrunal Thakur as Sita Mahalakshmi, the leading lady of the film, along with Rashmika Mandanna in an impressive role in 'Sita Ramam.' In addition to Bhoomika Chawla, Tharun Bhascker, Prakash Raj, Gautham Menon, and others will have significant roles in this movie. The soundtrack for the movie was written by Vishal Chandrashekhar.
